According to research from Search Institute, a spark is what people are really passionate about doing, an activity that unleashes their energy and joy, one that may allow them to express themselves and make their own unique contributions to the world. Finding and exploring that spark is an important part of your child's education and development. When young people know and develop a spark and have the support of several adults in growing it, they:

- Have higher grades in school
- Have higher school attendance
- Are more likely to be socially competent
- Are more likely to be healthy physically
- Are more likely to volunteer to help others
- Are more likely to care for the environment, and
- Are more likely to have a sense of purpose
